Pregnancy in women with acute myocardial infarction is associated with high maternal and perinatal morbidity and mortality. We investigated the characteristics and outcome of pregnancies in women with acute myocardial infarction. The histories of pregnancies in a consecutive series of women who had had an acute myocardial infarction were reviewed. Of 1442 women with acute myocardial infarction registered, 146 pregnancies (10%) had occurred. The mean age of the patients was 35.5 years. During a mean follow-up time of 33.7 months (median 25.7), the cumulative rate of hospitalization for acute myocardial infarction was 19% (95% confidence interval 11 to 27%). In 13 patients (9.0%), one or more acute myocardial infarctions occurred during pregnancy. The study group consisted of 67 women (46.5%). The overall maternal in-hospital mortality rate was 7% (n = 10); four deaths were attributed to acute myocardial infarction. Maternal complications (n = 4; 6%) were recorded. The perinatal mortality rate was 3% (n = 4); two deaths were directly related to myocardial infarction. One of the acute myocardial infarctions in women that occurred during a pregnancy was fatal. The overall maternal mortality rate was 12% (n = 16). Twelve women had one or more recurrent acute myocardial infarctions (3.7 per 100 patient-years); seven survived. All delivered infants were liveborn; seven (44%) were delivered by cesarean section. The perinatal mortality rate was 19% (n = 27), and this was attributed directly to acute myocardial infarction in 12 (32%) cases. Ten women were lost to follow-up. The outcome of pregnancies that occur in women with acute myocardial infarction is unfavorable. This outcome, however, is better than the prognosis of women with acute myocardial infarction who do not become pregnant.Botswana heatwave: Lack of power, water, sanitation lead to d0c515b9f4
