In order to assess the prevalence of serologic markers of current and recent hepatitis A infection in persons with chronic liver disease, 163 such patients were studied. Thirty-seven (23%) had the IgM anti-HAV, and 15 (9%) had both IgM and IgG anti-HAV. Patients with autoimmune hepatitis were more likely to be positive for IgM anti-HAV (28 vs. 19%; p less than 0.05) and serologic evidence of current or recent infection (36 vs. 13%; p less than 0.0001) than patients with other chronic liver diseases. The majority of IgM anti-HAV was detectable in the first 6 months after the onset of jaundice in patients who had the most severe liver dysfunction. Sera from 90 patients tested during the recent epidemic of hepatitis A (1974-1976) were also assayed for IgM anti-HAV, IgG anti-HAV, IgM anti-HBc, and IgM anti-HBs. These tests were positive in 22% of the patient group as a whole. Only 5 (7%) of 71 patients who had IgM anti-HAV also had IgM anti-HBc. These findings confirm the high prevalence of current and recent hepatitis A virus infection in persons with chronic liver disease. Relationship of plasma-free-testosterone and -estradiol to the fasting level of cholesterol in normal adult men. Plasma concentrations of testosterone and estradiol were measured in ten adult normal male subjects. Testosterone and estradiol were measured by radioimmunoassay. Testosterone was measured after hydrolysis of all precursors of steroid precursors and was also measured as free and conjugated. The androgen and estradiol levels were related to the cholesterol content of the blood. There was a significant negative correlation between the ratio of testosterone to cholesterol and the ratio of estradiol to cholesterol. There was a significant negative correlation between the ratio of testosterone to cholesterol and the ratio of estradiol to cholesterol. There was a significant negative correlation between the ratio of free-testosterone to cholesterol and the ratio of free-estradiol to cholesterol. There was no significant correlation between the ratio of total-testosterone to cholesterol and the ratio of total-
