I did ok with my little one. I think I spent the most time just watching her. It was fun to see her develop. She loved putting stuff in her mouth. She loved exploring everywhere.

She loved playing with the water and trying to wash her feet. Every time she tried to eat something she would wipe her mouth because I told her it would get all over the table. I kept seeing things in her face like clumps of hair. She would try to hide stuff under her tongue. I kept thinking that meant there was more that she wanted to do. I also think she was a bit disappointed that I wasn't seeing it all. My older one is not as interested in exploring at the moment. I spent the first few hours of our trip playing with her and getting her ready for bed. She sat through dinner, but didn't really do much except play with her food. She wasn't tired, but she was pretty grumpy after her nap. I think she wasn't ready to go out as much as the other one. I did play with her when I wasn't with my son. I just didn't get too much time with her. For some reason I thought that since we took two kids she would be less interested in what I was doing with the other one. I realized
