Go to "Internet" and download the program. Choose "Autocad 16" from the "Autodesk" folder. When you start the program click "Autocad Expert 2012 for AutoCAD". Choose "Build your own project". Choose "Build your own project for AutoCAD 2012". Choose "Autocad and model". Enter "12u", "Autocad and model 2012" and "Global Autocad and model 2012". Enter the license key of your Autocad. Open the project. Run Autocad. Done! { "name": "LtdMateB", "author": "fofa", "version": "0.1.0", "matches": [ { "search": "body", "text": "LTDMATE.B" } ] }Q: Is the regex returning matches for every line in my string? I am trying to use the below regex to find if the first part of the string is equal to the the last part of the string and the whole string is on the same line. The regex I am using is (.*)(@.*). For example: Check that the first word in the string is the last word of the string. @test some test another test some more test The expected result is true The actual result is true true true true All lines seem to be returning true as the regex seems to be matching at every line in the string. A: The best way to do what you're trying to do would be to use a single regular expression to test every line of the text string separately. Here's a sample program that does that using the Regex.IsMatch method: class Program { static void Main(string[] args) { string test = "Check that the first word in the string is the last word of the string.\r @test\r some test\r another test
