I am not a big fan of politics, but this had to be the most powerful, moving, and beautiful speech I've heard. At the age of 75, Sir Winston Churchill gave a magnificent speech which had the power to change the course of history. He was speaking to the American Society of Newspaper Editors when he made his remarks, but the speech applies to any country, any society, any group of people. With much, if not all, of his political career behind him, Churchill died on January 24, 1965. I quote extensively from his speech below because it is that well written and well delivered. I start with the words: "Faced by the growing peril, and the acute danger, the clear duty was to stop and reverse the course, to return to Britain and to England, and to place our fate once again in the hands of the British people. The political and economic system had proved unequal to the strain. Our people, being better than most, had endured the burden. But the time had come when they could carry no more." My commentary on those words is in parenthesis. (Faced by the growing peril, and the acute danger, the clear duty was to stop and reverse the course, to return to Britain and to England, and to place our fate once again in the hands of the British people. The political and economic system had proved unequal to the strain. Our people, being better than most, had endured the burden. But the time had come when they could carry no more.) Churchill saw the peril as a threat to the survival of the world. He saw the challenge of the Soviet Union as a challenge to the survival of freedom. He said: "The hour had come, the moment for the British Empire, the United States, and all who love freedom to work with a will and a wisdom all their own for the common good of mankind. We must not be blinded by
