The Scripping Script (.scr) is a simple tool to write text on any opened.pdf document. This text will be stored in a.txt file inside the folder of the pdf file. Scripping a document can be done when a pdf file is already opened or when it is opened and when the pdf document is already read. The text inside the file can be modified or deleted when Scripping is not done. Scripping Script's main purpose is to create a text file from a.pdf document that can be later read with any text reader. How to use: Insert the text you want to Scrape on any pdf document, adjust the reading settings and click OK. When Scripping is done, click on "Create text file", Save the text file inside the folder that contains the pdf file you just Scraped and rename the file to contain the original name and folder of the pdf file. IMPORTANT: The file that contains the text should be readable by any text reader. If the file does not contain text, you will get an error message, check that you've chosen the correct pdf file and repeat the process. If you open a.docx file using a text editor, you may see a warning message saying that the file contains malware. This is not dangerous and does not impact your system. If you want to get rid of this message, you can use the software below. BleachBit is an open source program that removes computer programs and data files that may have been left behind after uninstalling software and operating systems.
