I'm allowed to define the size of the array and it's max value. For example: `int arr[size];` I then have to print the values from index 1 - size. With that I have done this: `printf("%-3d", arr[1]); printf(" "); printf("%-3d", arr[2]); printf(" ");` This works perfectly fine. But my problem is that I have to print exactly 3 characters instead of an array of 3 chars. I've tried the following: `printf("%-3d", arr[1] + arr[2] + arr[3] + arr[4]);` But that didn't work. Any ideas? A: You can use `sprintf` to format with a required number of characters. There is a version which allows a variable argument list and a version which requires a fixed length format string. The `sprintf` specifiers are: `*d` = The `%-*d` formats a signed and unsigned integer as a pointer to an int, with width specifier `*d` is for width, - for minus. `*u` = The `%-*u` formats a signed and unsigned integer as a pointer to an unsigned int, with width specifier `*u` is for width, - for minus. `*s` = The `%-*s` formats a pointer as a null-terminated string, with width specifier `*s` is for width, - for minus. For example, `#include int main (void) { int arr[5] = { 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 }; printf ("%5d ", *(arr + 1)); printf ("%5u ", *(arr + 2)); 3e33713323`
