The USA has not won a single gold medal in the Pyeongchang Olympics, but not all hope is lost. First up are the medal hopefuls for the games that have already taken place. Women's hockey The US beat Canada in the gold medal game by a score of 3-1 on Sunday, sending the Canadians to the bronze. But after coming so close to a perfect medal haul (they are still tied with Switzerland) the Americans will be eager to start putting together a winning record. Winning Olympic gold medals is something of a rarity – just eight of the 256 events in the history of the Olympics have been won by the US. Ryan Phelan, head coach of the USA's women's ice hockey team, said: "The positive is our history shows us we are a great champion. The success we're having in this tournament and the last game with a silver medal shows that. The failure at Nagano [in 2002] was completely different. We were low-octane. We had a lot of key players injured, we had to battle through a lot of injuries. We had a lot of recovery time." The women have been consistently improving since making their international debut at the Nagano Olympics, where they finished eighth. "Our main goal was to have fun," Phelan said. "We want to enjoy the experience. If you don't enjoy it, don't go." Dawn Staley, captain of the team and a star of the US women's basketball team, said: "Pyeongchang has been great. You get to meet new players. You get to meet new friends. Everybody puts in their best every day. That's the beauty about sport – it's all about overcoming adversity and using that adversity to your advantage." USA women's hockey coach of the year Paul Devorski added: "I know this is a small period but to see these ladies [varying from age 16 to 25] come into the national team and jump in as sub players and jump in and make our team better is rewarding." With a good training camp to look forward to at the end of the week, Devorski is optimistic about the team's prospects. "I think we can close a lot of those [
