KEYMACRO is a powerful, easy to use, powerful macro programming and recording utility, which lets you record all kinds of actions with your keyboard. Record any combination of keystrokes, mouse actions, key-presses and window moves. It is a keystrokes recorder for Windows.

KEYMACRO will record all the keystrokes and mouse actions you perform on the windows desktop, or any other programs you launch on the desktop. It can also record key-presses and mouse moves while a window is active, as well as keystrokes while running programs on the desktop. Simply choose what you want to record, and then click the record button. When you are done, just click the stop button and you will have a powerful macro for use in other applications, or simply copy it to the clipboard. KEYMACRO lets you create your own macros in a few minutes, and then save them to your computer. Once you start recording, you can save your keystrokes with names, descriptions, tags, and key combinations. For example, you could create a macro that saves all the sales data from a website to a database. You could record a keyboard macro that runs a specific web browser and pastes the link to the sales data from the website into the spreadsheet you are editing. You could record a keyboard macro that pastes the output of a calculation into a text editor. You could record a mouse macro that copies the last 10 pages of a document into a folder. You could create a keyboard macro that takes one button press to perform a task. You could create a mouse macro that takes several keystrokes to run a program.

KEYMACRO is a powerful, easy to use utility that lets you record all kinds of actions with your keyboard. Latest Features: * All the keyboard and mouse actions can be recorded together, or they can be recorded separately * Mouse actions recorded with KEYMACRO can be recorded with custom mouse buttons, as well as with the use of the mouse buttons * Full support for copying to clipboard * Support for keyboard macros in any Windows application How to Start: 1. Power. It's in the name. Just like the other piece of software in this category, FRSPCShutdown, this application has a very simple goal: shutting down your PC. Description: If you've ever had the infamous hang-up of the "Power On/Off/Restart" dialog appearing or your PC reboots randomly, you should install FRSPCReboot instead. It has an incredibly simple purpose: quickly shut down your computer and save any applications that are currently open on the screen. Intuitive interface The application starts up quickly and prompts you with a friendly interface that automatically detects your computer name and the operating system version. You can hit the "Shutdown" button to force a shutdown of your computer or you can simply tap the "Ok" button. When the application is done, you can choose to reboot, restart or shut down your computer. As noted above, you can force a shutdown of your computer using the "Shutdown" button. A clean shutdown will not only save your progress for any open projects, it'll also pop up a progress bar to indicate the final state of your PC. Users of older operating systems such as Windows XP or Windows Vista will have to press the "Shutdown" button to force a shutdown, while users of Windows 7 will be able to simply tap it. Portable Unlike the other app in this category, FRSPCReboot, you can run the program anywhere as long as the app is accessible from the computer's desktop. There's no need to place it on the Start menu or anywhere else since you can access it using its desktop shortcut. Description: Don't worry, we won't leave you completely in the dark about this application. Since we're talking about the same application as above, we can confidently say that FRSPCRestart is an excellent application. There is no doubt that this app will help you reboot your PC as fast as possible. A simple, intuitive interface, a portable setup process and a large number of changes that you can make after the reboot make it all worth the installation. It's worth noting that, since FRSPCRestart is a portable program, you don't have to place it on the Start menu or anywhere else on your computer. Description: FRSPCShutdown doesn't only let you shut down your PC, it also makes it much easier to reboot and save the progress of the operating system. The Windows

On Windows XP a user or administrator should shut down the computer by holding the "Start" button and tapping the "Shutdown" button, or by holding the "Ctrl" and "Alt" keys, and pressing the "Shutdown" button. If you chose the latter option, you would see the following message: "Power Manager is not responding. Please try shutting down this computer again." Problem description: The "Power Manager is not responding" error message, in Windows XP, can appear when using the "powercfg.msc" application to shut down the computer from the "Start" menu. There are two issues with the error: - If the "Windows XP" registry is not set correctly for the motherboard, the ""Power Manager is not responding" error can occur during the shutdown. - If the motherboard is set for "Safe Mode", when the ""Power Manager is not responding" error occurs, the ""Windows XP" operating system is not available. To ensure that the ""Power Manager is not responding" error message is corrected, a user or administrator should modify the Windows registry to ensure that the ""Power Manager is not responding" error message does not occur. One method for correcting the Windows registry for the motherboard is by installing Windows XP with the "Setup" disk, which has a repair program. If the ""Windows XP"
