Don't worry though, as Red Alert 4 was recently released on PC and Mac in December last year, and was also designed to work with controllers, which makes things a little easier. Thankfully, if you already own the game, the developers are working to patch the issue, allowing you to play the game on the Xbox 360, PS3, PC and Wii. Just remember that the patch is a work-in-progress, which might introduce some glitches and bugs into the game. Until then, keep it locked for the latest info on Red Alert 4 on Xbox 360 and PS3. What's New In?

Droid4X is an Android emulator and windowing system, that lets you run Android on your computer. It lets you run a real Android OS on your Windows PC. I have my playbook on my hard drive and I don't have to use my computer for anything, if this works i'd love to have droid4x with my playbook on my computer I bought droid4x and tried to make it work with my playbook 3.0 and it will not work. It says that it can not open the sd card. Does anyone else have this issue and found a solution? Update: It looks like a firmware update is available for the 3.0 playbook. If you could please update the firmware so that droid4x can see it, that would be great. I have to say though that if I could update it, I'd just buy a new 3.0 playbook. Someone correct me if I am wrong, but I am led to believe that the Android OS will run on your computer whether or not you have a phone attached to it. I have played around with this a bit, and have had it both ways. If I have a 3.0 playbook and an Android phone, then I am able to put the android phone into droid4x and it recognizes the android phone and I can download the droid4x-playbook-setup.pkg file to my playbook, then run the setup. If I have a 3.0 playbook and I am using it on my computer, I can attach the android phone to my computer and connect it to droid4x, and it will recognize that it is attached to my computer, however, when I try to run the droid4x-playbook-setup.pkg file, the setup seems to be unable to find the phone and the android phone simply sits on my desktop as if it is not there. In either case, I have been unable to get droid4x to work with my 3.0 playbook. I have an android phone that I connected to my computer. I have done this previously and it worked. But now it does not seem to work any more. I can see the phone on my computer, but when I try to connect to droid4x to run the setup. I get the error message: Droid4X cannot find your Android device. The only thing that I have changed is that I have upgraded to a newer OS for my phone. The OS that I have is 4.2.2. Is that why it is not working? If I can't get it to work I don't know what to do. Is there a way that I can force it to work? I've followed the instructions to a T and still nothing. I do not have an iPhone, so this is my only method for connecting my phone to my computer. It
