Nice picture, very informative post. another great article You wrote.  1mih9jywDulbecco's sea-turtle as a test system for newer polychlorinated biphenyl-adsorption methods. Polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) are persistent in the environment and are toxic to vertebrates. Currently applied methods for PCB cleanup of complex matrices, such as seawater, do not provide sufficiently good information about the quality of PCB degradation. We tested the utility of a sea-turtle, nesting on the coast near Oslo Fjord, as a test system for applying various sea-water contaminant analyses. Sea-turtles were sampled from the same area as historical industrial PCB sources and used as a control site. Three approaches were applied to analyzing sea-turtles: 1. The traditional toxicological analysis, with a focus on some PCB congeners determined by gas chromatography and determination of the 24-h accumulation of PCB congeners. 2. Traditional analysis of the wet-weight of sea-turtles. 3. Analysis of the activity of a detoxification enzyme, glutathione S-transferase (GST) with respect to PCB-adduct formation. The results showed no significant difference between the turtles from the control and the sample sites. The wet-weight and activity of GST, however, showed significant differences between the samples.// SPDX-License-Identifier: GPL-2.0/* * Copyright (C) STMicroelectronics SA 2017 * Authors: Fabien Dessemme * Yannick Ferre * for STMicroelect
