***** Tune Typing
Tune typing is the computerized transcription of song melodies. Currently the most common utility is Lucy, created in 1997 by Paul Lemke. How can Tune Typing identify pitches in a song? The fine structure of music is captured in a digital form. To understand this quantization, audio properties are measured and encoded as digital variables. The duration of a musical note is measured in terms of milliseconds. The pitch of a note is expressed as a frequency. Frequency is calculated by dividing the note's period (length) by the duration of the note. Frequency is quantified as an arbitrary number of cycles per second, which falls in the range
