And this lightness is well protected in the film - primarily by Prakash Raj who plays Siddarth's father with a fair degree of ego-free .Q: Promise not being used in promise chain I am calling the following function:

function getService (url) { return new Promise(function (resolve, reject) { $http({ method : 'GET', url : url, }).then(function successCallback(response) { console.log(response.data); console.log(response.status); console.log(response.config);
resolve(response); }, function errorCallback(response) { console.log(response.status); reject(response); } ) }); } var _url = "", _data = { /a bunch of data including some variables that change from call to call/ }; getService(_url)
.then(function (response) { console.log("finshed promise");
console.log(response); }, function (error) { console.log(error);
}) Which gives me this output: finshed promise Promise
{$$state: "pending", $$value: { }} I would expect the output of the function to be 82138339de
