Network/IP Scanner Shared Resources is a handy, very simple and efficient utility that enables you to locate the IP addresses of other network users. Run this utility on a computer that is connected to your network, and your computers will reveal the resources that are shared by the other users. You can use this utility to locate other computers and to see the IP addresses they share in a specific network, so you can connect to them or attempt to share a resource. Get access to the shared resources in your network by using a tool such as Network/IP Scanner Shared Resources. Network/IP Scanner Shared Resources uses a concept called Sockets, which enables you to connect to the resources of other computers in the network. The Sockets concept allows network administrators to establish an active session with another computer in a network, using a certain protocol. This feature is helpful for the purpose of file sharing, among other things. Network/IP Scanner Shared Resources includes Windows 2000, Windows Server 2003 and XP. This tool can be used with any network connection such as LAN, WAN or Wi-Fi. When you launch the Network/IP Scanner Shared Resources program, you will be able to browse through the data of active computers on your network. The results will show the IP address, DNS name and the shared resources for each active computer in your network. You will be able to view the results using the provided icons, displaying both the IP address and the resources of the other machines on your network. You can open any resource folder in Explorer by simply double-clicking on the folders. Copy file paths to the clipboard, which you can use in any kind of application, or perform a search in order to gather more information.
