What's New In?

This widget has been designed to work with Yahoo! Like the Flash version of this widget, so please be sure to include the Yahoo! Flash Objects as well. ▯ Yahoo! Flash Player! Introduction: It would not be possible to have a widget in an environment where the Internet is unavailable. So, for anyone who wants to offer this widget to those customers who use their own Internet Connectivity, please go to the Modules section, below, for the appropriate module. Yahoo! Widget Engine Basics: The yahoo! widget engine works in much the same way as the flash widget engine. One important difference is that it was designed as a non-proprietary widget engine. The Yahoo! Widget Engine is designed to work with the Yahoo! Homepage. The Yahoo! site has been setup for you so you can just double-click the Yahoo! icon on the bottom right of your browser and you will be taken directly to your homepage. If you have not registered with Yahoo! you will need to register with them first, so that you can login. The Yahoo! site also offers a free double-click on home page so that you can access all their services immediately. As a registered user the Yahoo! site allows you to access all their services from the homepage. Pricing: The free Yahoo! account has a number of services available to the user, and some services require payment. If the user wishes to use these services, they will need to be connected to the Internet and logged in. Basically, the user needs to be "on the Internet" (yes, that means while they are on the Yahoo! homepage they will need to be connected to the Internet!) In order to register or log into their account they need to be at the site location. As well as the above services, the Yahoo! site offers other general web-based services such as e-mail, news, weather, jobs, etc., and the Yahoo! Shopping service. Depending on your location in the world, some services may require you to be "on the Internet" at a certain time of the day, in order to take advantage of them. Money: You will need to have an account with an Online Merchant if you want to offer the
