Graduated filters. These are a simple Photoshop technique that enable you to adjust brightness, contrast, and color tone. The classic graduated filters were popularized by Ron Frasc. They can be adjusted with the `_fx_` (`_fx_` is an easy way to get to the filter area in Photoshop) feature in the top toolbar. Figure 9-22 shows the filter panel for its graduated filter feature. Figure 9-22. The Photoshop `_fx_` (File → FX) opens a panel where you can adjust the filters you've applied. Blur filters. When you blur an image with a hard, metallic motion (like you might see in a photograph of an astronaut walking on the moon), it's called a `_blur_`. Blurs can be adjusted with the `_fx_` panel in the top toolbar. You can add blurs in Photoshop by pressing Shift+S/Ctrl+S (for `_s_ blur`) and pressing the button on the right side of the layer thumbnail on the Layers panel. In recent versions of Photoshop, you'll also see the option to blur with a separate layer mask. You can see that in the upper right of Figure 9-23. The mask can be applied, or erased, with the paintbrush tool in the toolbar. Figure 9-23. In some versions of Photoshop, the blur feature is available as a separate layer mask. You can apply the blur by pressing Shift+S/Ctrl+S and moving the brush cursor over an area of the layer mask where you want to blur the image. Liquify filters. These are similar to blurs except that they soften the edges of the edges of the image. You can add liquifies to an image by opening the filter panel and selecting Liquify and applying it to the selected layer. Liquify is found in the Filter menu. You'll see the Liquify Filters options when you open the filter panel. See the left side of Figure 9-24. Figure 9-24. The Liquify Filters panel is a key tool for creating cool effects in Photoshop. See the `_right_` side of Figure 9-24 for the setting. The left side of Figure 9-24 gives you an idea of what you can accomplish with these powerful tools. To use the liquify filters, move your cursor across the thumbnail of the selected layer and drag the cursor in the direction you want the image

Q: Why libnotify-bin doesn't start? I'm trying to use notifier from Linux (Ubuntu 12.04). After I run command: `sudo apt-get install libnotify-bin` I got: Reading package lists... Done Building dependency tree Reading state information... Done libnotify-bin is already the newest version. 0 upgraded, 0 newly installed, 0 to remove and 0 not upgraded. But notifier doesn't start, I mean, I don't see notification bar in the task bar. I have tried also: `sudo apt-get install libnotify-bin-dev` But nothing! :) Any ideas? Thanks!

A: I solved this issue by running: `sudo update-alternatives --install /usr/bin/notify-send notify-send /usr/bin/notify-send-curses` Where notify-send is the program name and notify-send-curses is the name of the configuration file. Then I updated `updated.config/notify-osd` and checked out the priority.

A: I had the same problem as you. I'm using Ubuntu 12.04 and my libnotify-bin version was 2.1.2. When I try to upgrade it to 2.2.1, I see that there are some new packages I should install in order to be able to upgrade properly. I did it and after reboot I have my notify-osd bar back again and I'm able to see notifications! In my case, I don't have these problems with libnotify-bin 2.2.2 I've just tested that it's not a bug of Ubuntu 12.04. Thanks for support!

A: I solved the problem by removing the package: `sudo apt-get purge libnotify-bin` and then installing it again, which made the icons back: `sudo apt-get install libnotify-bin`

Q: How do I display a certain amount of lines as the page number changes? I am using a table of contents to control what code/topic is displayed on a page and want to have pagination working. I set up a list of numbers for the page number for the table of contents. I've also set list of nodes --> Kinematics of fiddler crabs (genus Uca) at light onset and the role of brain serotonin in social interactions. At the light-dark transition, fiddler crabs are known to alter their motor activity to adapt to a new environment. We examined the motor coordination behaviors of Uca dubiliformis at the onset of the light. Two crabs were set on a platter in light and dark, respectively, and the movement of their mandibles and limbs was recorded at light onset. The movements of the crabs were more coordinated in light than in dark, and this coordination persisted for approximately 60 s. Within 10 min after light onset, brain serotonin levels were reduced, but serotonin had increased again after 30 min, suggesting that the changes in brain serotonin concentrations in Uca dubiliformis were time-dependent. Brain serotonin concentrations were also decreased following social interaction, suggesting that brain serotonin concentrations are related to social interactions.
