When you're beginning to use Photoshop, it's best to study a beginner's tutorial. You may find that you can get great results in no time by following a simple but time-tested method. What digital photo editing program should I use? Good question. Most people will answer with the name of their favorite software. However, using the right programs for the right jobs will result in more professional-quality work. If you want to create simple adjustments to a photo such as resizing, cropping, and adjusting color, then Elements or Photoshop are the ideal choices. If you're a purist and want to save an image and manipulate it later as a single file, then use one of the uncompressed formats such as JPEG or TIFF. In the past, high-end (and expensive) programs like Adobe's Bridge (which became part of Photoshop) were used to work on images with layered files and to do advanced editing. The programs created high-resolution raster images that were compatible with almost any editing platform. However, today the trend is to use simpler tools to create image files that can be loaded into any image-editing program and used immediately. Adobe's Photoshop Elements is a great choice for most users because it's small, has low system requirements, and doesn't try to do everything. Elements is a familiar interface and it teaches you the tools that you need as you work. You can start with an image and spend time becoming familiar with the Elements interface. A novel metastatic melanoma-associated antigen recognizing melanoma-associated chondroitin sulfate proteoglycan (MASP-3). The chondroitin sulfate proteoglycan melanoma-associated chondroitin sulfate proteoglycan (MASP-3) was isolated as an antigen recognized by cytotoxic T lymphocytes (CTLs) from the pooled spleens of both C57BL/6 and C3H mice immunized with C57BL/6 melanoma cells. The CTLs expressed a diverse T-cell receptor (TCR) Vbeta repertoire. CTLs recognizing MASP-3 epitopes were also detected in peripheral blood mononuclear cells (PBMCs) from a patient with disseminated melanoma. Using peptide-specific MHC class I tetramers, we confirmed that approximately 2% of the C57BL/6 splenocytes and PBMCs from the patient with disseminated melanoma recognized MASP-3. CTL-mediated lysis was inhibited by immunoglobulins containing a C-terminal MASP-3 binding site. CTLs recognizing MASP-3 did not recognize other proteoglycans purified from C57BL/6 melanoma cells. Furthermore, MASP-3 and proteoglycans containing the MASP-3 epitope were specifically expressed in melanoma cells. These results indicate that the novel melanoma antigen MASP-3 is one of the most promising melanoma-associated antigens, with the potential to be a novel target for immunotherapy of disseminated melanoma.
