Association of sleep-disordered breathing with pulmonary function, COPD risk factors, and exercise capacity. Sleep-disordered breathing (SDB) has been identified as a risk factor for chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) and demonstrated to be associated with impaired exercise capacity. It is not clear whether SDB contributes to the development of COPD or if it is an independent risk factor. This study evaluated the relationship between SDB and lung function and COPD risk factors. One hundred twenty-seven patients with clinically stable COPD were included. Of those, 107 met the established definition of SDB. Patients were classified as normal sleepers (n = 49), obstructive sleep apnea (OSA) (n = 42), or central sleep apnea (CSA) (n = 26). Impaired lung function, respiratory muscle dysfunction, and systemic vascular dysfunction were measured using spirometry, maximal expiratory pressure (MEP), serum carboxyhemoglobin, and pulse oximetry. The amount of daytime sleepiness was measured using the Epworth Sleepiness Scale (ESS). The risk factors for SDB were assessed by questionnaire. Patients with CSA, compared to patients with OSA, showed higher oxygen desaturation (85.1% +/- 6.3% vs 83.6% +/- 7.9%, p

What's New in the?

The CW is showing its support for embattled CBS drama, Supergirl, which is now a bona fide hit after launching to an impressive 8.3 million viewers and a 3.2 rating in the adults 18-49 demographic. The Arrowverse network, which airs its spinoff series on the network's Tuesday night schedule, also promoted Supergirl and said they plan to continue to support the show through the final season. "We have no plans to cancel the show. We've had phenomenal engagement," The CW president Mark Pedowitz said. "Next season, we will continue it." He added, "I think we have proven our thesis. 'Supergirl' is performing exceptionally well. It's a great series and an important series." Pedowitz didn't make a comment about the future of Arrow or The Flash, which is also moving to a new night as The CW expands its primetime schedule. The network aired the premiere of Supergirl, introducing a new superhero in the form of a previously unknown Kryptonian played by David Harewood. The CW announced that there will be a second season of Supergirl, which airs its second season on Monday, March 16 at 8 p.m. ET/PT. In addition to the premiere of Arrow, The Flash, and Supergirl, the network premiered three new programs on Tuesday night. Timeless, a new drama about time travelers, debuted to an 8.3 million viewers and a 3.4 rating in the 18-49 demographic. The TV Land comedy, The Exorcist, opened with 7.6 million viewers and a 2.8 rating in the 18-49 demographic. The show, which premiered last month, stars Lisa Lackey and is created by her longtime collaborator Chris Stone. A qualitative study of people's experiences of being 'switched'. Switched patients present with symptoms that may be a result of an avoidable communication breakdown in primary care. The aim of this study was to explore the experiences of people who have been switched from one service to another. An interview-based study informed by the Normalisation Process Theory of service re-engineering explored participants' experiences of being switched from primary to secondary services. A purposive sample of 7 people who had experienced being switched in healthcare were interviewed, to explore the impact of the 'switching on' experience. The domains explored included: the experience of being
