Q: Visual Studio 2010: How to setup continuous build I would like to make sure that after a developer checkin any code, the build is automatically tried from the source code. So I right clicked on my solution -> Build -> Options: -> Build continuously But then the Build starts after a user build and does not wait until the code is checked in. A: Click on solution -> Build and then in the Build Events tab of the tree view expand MSBuild up to a further level. This will show the complete build process and allow you to set a couple of things. A couple of useful things that you can check are Always build Before any of the above (before an actual check-in) I believe these will work in your case. of DNA replication can be observed in the Figure 3{ref-type="fig"} and it could be explained by the
