I have a MySQL database file that I created inside my web application directory using code like this: if (!file_exists($mysqldb_file)) { if (!mkdir($mysqldb_file)) { echo "Couldn't create directory '$mysqldb_file.'"; exit; } else { echo "Successfully created directory '$mysqldb_file.'"; } } else { echo "Directory already exists. Exiting."; exit; } if (!mysql_select_db($mysqldb_name, $mysqldb_db)) { echo "Couldn't connect to database '$mysqldb_name.'"; exit; } else { echo "Connection successfully made."; } Now, I am debugging with xdebug (php --xdebug.remote_enable=1 --xdebug.remote_autostart=true...) that is running on my laptop. I would like to be able to delete the database when I am done debugging. If I do this, I receive the following error: Error in file on line 1: Warning: mysql_select_db() expects parameter 1 to be string, object given in How do I delete my local database? A: You'd be better off using the DB abstraction layer PDO. It will save you from having to deal with the database connection. Q: How to set the default language for the computer in Android Studio How do I set the default language of Android Studio (on Mac) to Czech? Public Key 1.7.1 Incl Registration Crack.The most popular way to play games on your console at the moment is with a gamepad, but traditional gamepads can be bulky and not well-suited to a smartphone or tablet. I've previously written about the Gamejoy Adapter, a Bluetooth keyboard that connects to your PC via USB and is designed to connect to an Xbox 360 controller. The company finally has a smartphone adapter on the market, but sadly its name is the GameCombo. The GameCombo is a Bluetooth adapter with a micro USB port. It connects to a smartphone or tablet (via an included micro-USB to micro-USB cable) so you can connect the device to a USB port on your PC to sync your controller with your game. It costs $59.99 but
