In this beautiful little book written by Harry Fosdall, we are told that " the recognition of God, / does not necessarily entail the rejection of any of the good tendencies of men.". Fosdall's first.book, which is a biography of Thomas Jefferson, is a testament to the wisdom of his statement. The greatest American is credited with the production of the Declaration of Independency. a. part of the latter, is one of the most famous passages in American history, "a wall of separation between Church and State." It has been adopted, by the Supreme Court, as the central principle of American. government.
