Photoshop CS2 Basics Photoshop CS2 was one of the most significant updates to Photoshop since its release. The program focuses on features that photo editors use most often, including layers, paths, gradient fills, masking, and much more. Figure 2-1 illustrates how the interface works. First, you see the Layers panel and the paths, as well as the channels, that make up the image. In the layers panel, you can see the thumbnail of the top-most layer and the area beneath it to see any layers that are beneath the top layer. You can see the order in which the layers were created as well. FIGURE 2-1: Layers, channels, and paths make up the image. You can work on any open image in Photoshop, but you must use the layers panel to set up layers and layers to work on. To do so, you can select the image on the right side of the interface as shown in Figure 2-1. Then click on the new Layers panel menu at the top of the workspace, as shown on the left side of the figure, to open the Layers panel. Alternatively, you can click the Layers button at the bottom of the workspace or the Layers panel to display the Layers panel as shown on the right side of Figure 2-1. Either way, you can click the eye icon that you see at the top right of the Layers panel to make it smaller or larger. You can also scroll to the right side of the panel to collapse or expand the panel. Just as with previous versions, the Layers panel is where you create new layers. To do so, click on the New Layer icon at the bottom of the panel. When you place new layers on the image, you can't change their locations, but you can move them so they display on the Layers panel. Once you create new layers, you can name them and change their properties, which are described in the following two sections. Working with layers In addition to the Layers panel, Photoshop's

This article contains comprehensive information on how to take screenshots in Photoshop. A complete list of screenshot alternatives can be found here. What is a Screenshot? Screenshot means a duplicate of the entire visible portion of an active window or application. You can take a screenshot using the Print Screen key which is the key on the top-right corner of your keyboard. Just press the Print Screen key and that window or application will be copied onto your computer's clipboard or back up RAM. Then, you need to edit the copy on your computer's clipboard. The way a screenshot is displayed varies depending on the operating system. In Mac, you can see the entire copied image in a square box while Windows displays the entire image in a rectangle. In short, when you press the Print Screen key you will get a window or application screenshot. You can edit the screenshot in any graphics editor that supports editable image format like Photoshop. Open Photoshop, click File, Open and go to the folder that you saved the screenshot file. Right-click and choose Open. This will be the file with a.png extension at the end of the file name. If you want to change the file extension to.jpg,.tif, or.bmp, you can use the following two commands in a terminal: mv file.png file.jpg mv file.png file.tiff mv file.png file.bmp

How to Take Screenshot in Photoshop? In this section, you will learn how to take a screenshot in Photoshop. Open the Photoshop editor and press the Print Screen button. You will see a screenshot of your entire window. Find the screenshot that you need to edit. Edit the screenshot in any graphics editor that supports editable image format like Photoshop. Here is a video tutorial for taking screenshot in Photoshop

Find the Screenshot Photoshop Elements provides a built-in Screenshot panel that will help you find the screenshot that you want to edit. You can access it by clicking the Screenshot button on the top panel. In the Screenshot panel, you will get two options: Screenshots, and Last Screenshots. You will always get the last screenshot you took in the Screenshot panel. The screenshot is the one that is in the clipboard and is visible on the top of the screen. 388ed7b0c7

What's New In?

The U.N. General Assembly recently adopted a number of resolutions that further cement China's domination of the world. This is again reflected by the U.N.'s list of Agenda Items for December. Aside from blocking the entry of the U.S., Russia, India, Japan and South Africa, the U.N. also decided to help groups "dictate terms" to India and Pakistan and to propose a new and dangerous role for the world body. The major U.N. resolutions were adopted at the 59th session of the General Assembly in mid-October, including a resolution on "Financial Disclosure," a second resolution on "External Facilitation of Arms Control," and a resolution calling for the creation of "counter-measures" against cyber-attacks. In terms of developing weaponry, China's resolution "to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East" was adopted, as was a resolution on "Wartime Measures to Protect Internally Displaced Persons." Apart from these and other resolutions, many specific resolutions on specific issues were adopted. China's domination of the General Assembly follows its position in the U.N. Security Council, which has been held by China since January 2009. And there is absolutely no doubt that the U.N. resolutions will be followed. For, as we have seen over the years, China has shown time and again that it will be willing to go to any length to get its way at the U.N. and beyond. After the U.S. administration dropped out of the Security Council, China requested that the General Assembly be allowed to establish a full-time "permanent representative" of China to the U.N. The General Assembly has established this position, which is currently held by the Chinese ambassador, Zhang Jun, who has held this position since the beginning of 2012. China's domination at the U.N. clearly took a turn for the worse in the spring of 2011 when the Arab Spring began to unfold. From that time until now, China has been in a war to prevent any and all proposals that would challenge its growing domination at the U.N. Beijing has thus pushed hard in the General Assembly, within the U.N. Security Council and even at the G-20. The U.N. didn't get on top of this in
