In this paper, I will utilize the theories and concepts of the learning environment to discuss two learning technologies: the actual classroom, and computer-assisted instruction (CAI). I will be discussing both from my own experiences. Also I will be using the theories in regard to humanistic learning. Advisor's Abstract This paper addresses the question: 'What does it mean to be human?' The purpose of this paper is to examine the current ideas surrounding the concept of the human and to question how it fits into the modern classroom. I will examine the theories and concepts of the learning environment to discuss how the classroom may be one of the areas where the humans interact and not the other way around as implied by some theories. I will be using the theories in regard to humanistic learning. I will also be using my own experiences as an example of how the classroom may be one of the areas where the humans interact. Therefore this paper will discuss computer-assisted instruction and the actual classroom. There are no comments yet on this publication.

Be the first to share your thoughts. Q: How do I get the value of a TextBox in a dynamic created tab? I have an aspx page where I use some js and jquery to create a tab. The tab contains a group of textboxes. I know how to get the value of a textbox that is created statically, like this TextBox1.Text The only problem is that I cant figure out how to do it dynamically. I need to know how to do it so I can use it with a function I create. I have tried to do this Page.Form.Controls["txtCheckoutInfo"].Value or this ViewData["txtCheckoutInfo"].Value but then I keep getting a null reference exception. A: @NHS too can't figure out the other answer which was posted at the Trypanosoma evansi is an Old World trypanosome that has been recognized as a pathogen of domestic animals and as an epidemic agent in humans for a number of years. The reasons for its emergence as a human pathogen are complex, and seem to reflect a number of ecological factors and the ability of the agent to infect new hosts. Most recently, an association has been reported between T. evansi and an unusual complication of trypanosomosis: Chagas' disease, which commonly occurs in Mexico, Central and South America. This review provides a brief overview of the factors that contribute to the emergence of T.

evansi as a pathogen of humans and its association with Chagas' disease. Q: How to generate from each record of a table in PostgreSQL

I am not well-versed in SQL, and I think I am asking the wrong question. I have a table like this

CREATE TABLE public.rookie ( event_id integer NOT NULL, rookie_id integer NOT NULL, event_priority integer NOT NULL, CONSTRAINT rookie_pkey PRIMARY KEY (event_id, rookie_id), CONSTRAINT rookie_event_fkey FOREIGN
KEY (event_id) REFERENCES public.event (event_id)
