I'm using django's datetime.datetime(year, month, day, hour, minutes, seconds) constructor to convert an input date string into a datetime object for an app I'm building. It's working great. However, I need to convert the retrieved datetime object to a POSIX (seconds) dateTime. Is there any way to do this? A: The answer to my question was to not use django's datetime object. For future reference, if you use moment.js's date object, you can convert it to an epoch timestamp. var dateObject = '2015-03-07 20:51:00' var epoch_date = moment(dateObject).unix() console.log(epoch_date); // => 1351756200 Q: Which one is a better choice of connectors? I recently bought a new AVR based board, which has a firmware revision 1.26. It contains an On-board SD card interface, with a bunch of data for storing and playback of MP3s. I used a 16MB microSD card (with a 4GB SD card adapter, for the original 1
