Adobe Photoshop CS3 Crack

There are several key ways Photoshop is faster than the competition. Because Photoshop is aimed at designers as much as photographers, it's not surprising that many of the faster features are implemented in Photoshop rather than having to recreate them in new programs. Among Photoshop's major speed improvements over other programs are: Performing multiple operations in parallel for speed. (Multiple execution threads, each of which can simultaneously work on different parts of the image.) Many of Photoshop's features are polygonal, or involve smoothing and blurring surfaces. Let's look at the top 10 Photoshop speed tricks. 1. Multiple Process Operations in Parallel You can (or should, if you're a professional) select multiple areas of an image and select "multiple" from the Process menu to start any task on all selected areas simultaneously. (Think of each layer as a single pixel on a sheet of paper. You can have multiple processes operating on the sheet at once.) This speeds up the process of drawing or editing different parts of the image, since the computer is better able to move through the image faster. 2. Smart Objects Photoshop has a "Smart Objects" feature that allows you to save multiple parts of an image into one file, for example if you have a retouched photo of a person and want to save their eye color, nose length, age, and other parts of their photo separately. There are other uses of this feature as well, such as to edit objects in an image that are already grouped together. 3. Layers and Gradients for Easy Editing One of Photoshop's best-kept speed features is the ability to place multiple images on one layer, which allows you to work on all of them simultaneously. It's also possible to add transparency and create gradients in layers. Gradients are much easier to create than it is to make a smooth edge in other programs. The main drawback to having multiple layers is that you need to keep track of which layer is what and you can accidentally move a layer to the wrong place, undoing its edits. This speed trick therefore requires an understanding of your layers and how to manipulate them. 4. Custom Paths You can use the Paths menu for high-level operations, and use Custom Paths to draw paths by hand or using artistic tools. The paths are then drawn with the outline or filled to turn into a mask you can use to edit other objects on the image.

Q: Smooth Browser Scroll for Desktop Sizes I want to add a button for my visitors who has a desktop computer to scroll the page back to the top when clicking on the button. I've seen the following, but it isn't smooth for my visitors. Below is my code. $(document).ready(function() { $(window).on('scroll', function() {

if($(window).scrollTop() > 600) { $('#top').fadeIn(250); } else { $('#top').fadeOut(250); } }); }); Top of the page What should I do to have a smooth scrolling for my desktop visitors? A: Here's a working version: Make sure the initial scrollTop() is set to 0 for it to work properly (if the site is already scrolled down, then you want to call it with scrollTop(0) instead).

$(function () { var init = $(window).scrollTop(); $('#t op').fadeIn(250).delay(1000)
.fadeOut(250, function () { if (window.pageYOffset >= init) { window.scrollTo(0, 0);
} }); });

Q: send inputs with jquery to ajax php script I have this form that when you click on a submit button it sends data to an ajax php script.
The php script processes the input based on the selection and returns a data back to the ajax function onSuccess. The problem is that if you don't use any input (click on submit button before typing anything) the PHP script returns undefined. I am assuming that it's because the php script is able to see the inputs, and so it is not undefined. Here is a picture of how it is working (in Firefox 3.5.7): the green rectangle is where the input is entered the blue rectangle is where the error is coming from How can I get the php script to always have the input values to work with? A: you can use this function to see the value of the fields... function getValue($form) { var values = {}; $form.find("input,select").each(function() { if ($(this).attr("type")!== "hidden") { values[$(this).attr("name")] = $(this).val(); } }); return values; } and you can call it in your ajax success... $.ajax({ type: "POST", url: "./script.php", data: {action: "do something", firstname: getValue($("#yourForm"))["firstname"] }, success: function (data) { alert(data); } }); Here's a test of Finnish-ledpeacekeeping diplomacy European
