In clinical practice, IVTA has a duration of action of approximately 3 to 6 months. In patients with severe or refractory disease, retreatment is often necessary. Batioglu et al found that nearly 2 out of 5 patients required retreatment over a 24-month period. Each retreatment exposes patients to additional endophthalmitis risk and makes cataract formation more likely (in phakic patients). These factors have driven pharmaceutical companies to develop longer-acting corticosteroids that can be delivered intravitreally. Two corticosteroids that are currently in phase 3 trials are DDS-Posurdex (Dexamethasone Posterior Segment Drug Delivery System, Allergan, Inc., Irvine, CA) which lasts for 6 months, and the Medidur (fluocinolone acetonide, Alimera Sciences, Alpharetta, GA) which may last up to 3 years. If these medications obtain US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approval, the benefits of a long-term single injection of corticosteroid will need to be weighed carefully against the side effects.
